"ONLY JOKING," SAYS BLOCK OF BOODLE CHARGE

Delegate "Can't Remember" What He Told Dr. Hammerstein, His Colleague, but Declares No Bribery Proposition Was Made With Serious Intent.

TRACTS DISTRIBUTED UPON DESKS OF HOUSE MEMBERS

Speaker Gazolet Jests With Member of Combine About Published Statement That $975 Was Named as Reward for Passing Terminal Bill.

"I might have told the 'doc' that the boys expected to get $40,000. If I had said so I was only joking. Everybody who knows me says I'm a great kiddier. But more likely Hammerstein's story is not air. Who's going to roll the next pill?"

The foregoing was the reply made half in jest by Delegate Edward M. Block of the Eleventh ward to the charge of Dr. Edward Hammerstein, representative of the Twelfth ward, as told exclusively in Friday's Post-Dispatch, that his colleague had divulged a deal whereby those voting for the passage of the Terminal facilities legislation were to receive $75 apiece.

The House of Delegates met in regular session at 7:30 o'clock Friday night. Delegate Block was on hand early, but he had hardly taken off his coat when Speaker Gazolet called:

"Eddie, that's a rich giggle they have about you in tonight's Post-Dispatch."

"A what?" asked Block, as if stupefied at the remark.

"A giggle—a story," explained Andy. "Don't you know that Doc Hammerstein says you were the fellow that wanted to pay him $975?"

"O, well," replied Block. "I used to hit the pipe myself. They ain't nothing to that giggle, Andy. My conscience is easy."

"I am glad indeed to hear that, Mr. Block," said the speaker, making a pretentious bow, as he walked away.

Can't Remember

Mentioning Money.

A few minutes later the House was down in business, struggling with weighty problems of legislation. Delegate Block seemed the most perturbed of the 22 members present.

He tried to make light of Dr. Hammerstein's serious accusation. He finally said: "The truth is I did have a talk with the 'doc' about legislation affecting the Terminal people. There was nothing private or confidential in the talk. I do know just what I said, neither probably does the 'doc' remember all he had to say. I don't remember anything being said about money. The statement that I marked down $975 in chalk on a table in my alcove to indicate the price which was to be paid is certainly not true. Fellows often joke, you know, so I might have in fun made some remark, but that's all there is to it. It is so long ago that really the whole incident is lost in the maze of thought which has been needed to sift the great legal propositions submitted to the assembly for judgment and decision."

Delegate Block held short conferences with all of his friends during the progress of the House session.

First he grew confidential with Delegate McCarthy; then he called on Henry Weeks of the Seventeenth ward, while he whispered at some length to Tim McAuliffe, chairman of the public improvements committee.

Members Warned

To Do Right Now.

Finally, none of these individuals appearing to afford him satisfaction or comfort he went up to see Speaker Gazolet. "Andy" was all smiles as his friend "Eddie" came forward. There is a pitcher of water on the speaker's desk, and Block helped himself freely to the pure liquid as he rattled along in a low tone of voice, and Gazolet kept nodding affirmatively.

The session lasted more than one hour. When adjournment came, Block sought several of his friends and left the city hall with them.

Shortly after Gazolet called the House to order the papers were ordered by Delegate O'Neill of the Eleventh ward, to distribute religious tracts among the members, the opening paragraph reading as follows: "Begin to do right now or you are lost, lost, lost forever!"

HOUSE TABLES OBJECTION

TO CEMENT SPECIFICATION.

Speaker Pro Tem, McCarthy of the House of Delegates voted against four street improvement bills after a resolution introduced by him to eliminate the designation of Warren cement for bituminous macadam had been defeated.

McCarthy's resolution asked the Board of Public Improvements to submit amended ordinances for street improvements without designating any special brand of cement.

A motion made by Delegate H. L. Weeks that the resolution be filed was defeated, and the House of Delegates went into committee of the whole to consider the improvement bills. All were passed over the votes of McCarthy, who explained his votes by saying he was opposed to the restriction as to the use of material, and of Delegate Lackland, who not only opposed the restrictions as to material, but the kind of street, and Delegate Conran and Spivey.

A bill providing for an increase of $20 annually in the salaries of nine assistant chiefs of the fire department was introduced.

In the Council the Terminal bills were normally buried. The Council accepting the report of Chairman Davis of the committee on the Terminal bills, the bills were

League and World's Fair Backed Terminal Bills to Extent of Taking Options on Property in Railroad Track Neighborhood.

BROTHER OF DELEGATE ACTED AS PURCHASER

Bill Didn't Pass, and Money Advanced, $700, is Lost by Two Organizations to Adams Street Land Owners.

It developed at the City Hall today that the Business Men's League and the World's Fair corporation bought option on property which the Terminal Co. would have required if its bill had passed, and that they were left holding the bag when the House combine killed the bill.

Several property owners, most of them members of St. Malachy's parish, are $700 ahead, in the aggregate, for the same reason.

Among these are John J. Keely, assistant chief of detectives; Arthur J. Ryan, William Loneragan, Michael Downes and another man who is a client of the real estate firm of Bradley & Quinette.

The change of ownership in the $700 came about in this way:

Loneragan, Ryan, Downes, Keely and the others are owners of property on Adams street, from Montrose west one-half block to an alley. The Terminal bill provided for the turning over of Atlantic street, one block south of Adams, to the railroad company.

The Adams street property owners therefore objected to the passage of the Terminal bill.

They appeared before the committees of the assembly with their attorneys and argued that the destruction of the street and the extension of the railroad tracks so close to the homes of themselves or their tenants would work great damage to the value of their premises.

The Terminal facilities committees of the Business Men's League, headed by Elias Michael, and the same committee of the World's Fair, headed by George W. Parker, heard the objections and concluded they were well founded.

Wishing to remove every legitimate obstacle to the passage of the bill, they decided to secure control of this property.

According to Secretary Saunders of the Business Men's League both institutions, through their executive committees, authorized the expense necessary to securing options on all the property in this half block.

In conjunction with Mr. Michael, he set to work to secure the options. Mr. Michael deputized two of the employees of his firm—Stix & Co.—to aid in the work.

They are Messrs. Walsh and Block. The Mr. Block in question is Leon Block, brother of Edward M. Block of the House of Delegates, and of H. S. Block, assistant clerk of the House.

Hesitated, but

Gave Options.

Dec. 2 Walsh and Block secured an option on the 40 feet owned by Mr. Loneragan. The option ran for two months. They had Mr. Loneragan to the headquarters of the Business Men's League, where Mr. Michael paid $100 to Loneragan for the option.

Then Mr. Loneragan aided in getting the others to give options. Mr. Ryan headed the list, but finally did so. So did Mr. Keely, according to Mr. Loneragan, getting $50 for his option.

Mr. Downes also gave an option, and so did the clients of Bradley & Quinette, the representatives of the terminal facilities committees of the business organizations were in a position to argue for the passage of the bill, the Adams street property owners' objection being removed. Some of the Adams street property owners joined in urging the passage of the bill.

However, the bill did not pass. It was officially buried by the assembly Friday night.

Secretary Saunders still has the options, but he says they are worthless now to the organizations he represents.

"We have no use for the property, and we certainly will not exercise the privilege we have of buying the Adams street lots. We have just credited up the $700 as terminal facilities expenses and let it go at that."

"The property owners are $700 ahead on the deal, but we are not completely out of the deal, but we could to secure the passage of the bill."

The entire transaction is not quite clear to the beneficiaries of the deal.

"I did not know Mr. Block, and was surprised when he came to me to get the option," Mr. Loneragan told the Post-Dispatch. "But we all wanted to sell if the terminal was going to come right to our doors, and when he agreed to give me the price I wanted—$100—I cheerfully gave him the option for $100. He told me 'Mr. Michael sent him to me. I don't know Mr. Michael, but he took me to him and Mr. Michael paid me the money.'"

OPTIONS ARE BOUGHT BY

YOUNG MAN NAMED BLOCK.

Elias Michael, member of the executive committee of the Business Men's League, gave this explanation of the transaction: "In order to prevent the terminal people from being 'held up,' I got control of certain property in Atlantic street, which subsequently was to be turned over to the terminal association."

"We paid less than $100 for the options, which were bought by a young man named Block, employed at the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co."

"The terminal proposed to run along Atlantic street and it was necessary to cut the street through to avoid inconvenience in traffic. We felt that if the property we desired in order to effect the improvement was left in the hands of the owners until after the terminal ordinances passed an exorbitant price would be demanded for it. Accordingly I had Mr. Block secure the options in question and turn them over to the Business Men's League."

Mr. Michael refused to state Mr. Block's real name.

MURPHY ASSERTS CLEVELAND CAN WIN IF NAMED

"I Am Confident He Can Carry New York," Declares Tammany's Leader to Whom National Committeemen Look to Choose Presidential Candidate.

THIS DECLARATION PUTS A DAMPER ON PARKER BOOM

Committeemen Taggart Says Bryan Will Not Insist on Free Silver Plank and That Tariff Reform and Anti-Trust Declarations Will Dominate Platform.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Charles Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, is heart and soul in favor of Grover Cleveland's nomination for the presidency by the Democrats. He believes Mr. Cleveland can win easily. As goes Murphy, so goes Tammany Hall.

However, Mr. Murphy is not nursing any wild delusions as to the chances of Mr. Cleveland being nominated. He knows Mr. Cleveland has many bitter enemies. How strong these are, he can't decide to his own satisfaction.

In spite of the strong faith usually placed in Leader Murphy's words, the impression is stronger than ever today that Murphy's real purpose in bringing forward Mr. Cleveland at this time is to prepare the way to spring George B. McClellan at the last moment when it becomes apparent that Mr. Cleveland will not permit his name to be used. There was more McClellan talk today than ever before.

Mayor McClellan will visit St. Louis at the opening of the Exposition. There he will meet a large gathering of Democrats, of national prominence in the party.

Next to Murphy's declaration, the most significant fact in politics here, developed by the gathering of national Democratic committeemen from all parts of the country, is the declaration made with practical unanimity that the old Bryan issues are to be ignored in the new Democratic platform.

National Committeemen Thomas Taggart and others declared today at the Hoffman House that Mr. Bryan, who is to be a delegate to the convention, will not fight for the incorporation in the platform of the 16 to 1 issue.

"Why should we go back and reaffirm the issues of 1890 or 1896?" said Committeeman Taggart. "There would be just as much sense in going back twenty years and reaffirming the platforms of that period. The issues uppermost in 1890 are not at the front this time. Mr. Bryan will not insist that the party make a fight on this issue again."

"There will be live issues this time. Tariff reform and anti-trust declarations will dominate the Democratic platform. These are sufficient with which to win. With a strong platform on those lines and pointing to the record of the Republican administration we can win. The platform will be one which no conservative man can refuse to support."

"Anti-Trust Man Plank" Says Mack

Norman E. Mack, national committeeman from New York, agreed with Mr. Taggart, but declared that an anti-trust declaration would be the main plank of the platform.

Daniel J. Campau, national committeeman from Michigan, also declared for a conservative platform. He is of the opinion that the Bryan plank will be relegated to the rear.

Grey Woodson, national committeeman from Kentucky, said that Mr. Bryan would be a powerful figure in the convention and would have a following which would decide the choice of the convention. He does not believe, however, that the old issues are to be revived.

J. G. Johnson, national committeeman from Kansas, believes that the Bryan plank will control the convention and that the platform will be one of opposition to the trusts.

The interview with Murphy is printed in the World this morning. It has attracted wide attention here and is regarded as tantamount to a declaration that Mr. Cleveland is Tammany's candidate for the nomination, until further notice. It is also thought to be a challenge to David B. Hill and the Parker men for the control of the state convention.

WORKMAN FALLS FROM EADS BRIDGE, HELP AT HAND WHEN HE SANK

Injured by Striking Girder, He Made Valiant Struggle for Life in the River, but Went to His Death With Rescuers Near.

Falling 100 feet from Eads bridge to the river and striking an iron girder in his descent, Frank Sackman of Venice, was still alive when he plunged into the water and was able to fight valiantly for his life for a period of four minutes. Then, when help was almost within reach, he sank to his death.

Sackman was 23 years old, and an employee of the Massillon Bridge Co., which has been at work for several days on the iron girders of the bridge. He was working near the second pier Friday afternoon when he missed his footing and fell. The water is low and Sackman's fall seemed interminable to the many persons who witnessed it. He struck a girder and his body whirled about for a second, then plunged on down.

All expected to see the man disappear when he struck the water, but they saw a battle against death. The tug Reliance with rescuers put out quickly and was within 20 feet of the struggling man when his strength deserted him. He leaves a wife and two children.

Murphy's avowed disappointed the friends of Judge Parker because of the effect it will have upon the numerous members of the national committee now in town. They fear that Murphy's attitude will be fatal to the progress of Judge Parker's candidacy and that the committeemen will go home convinced that, with Murphy opposed to him, Judge Parker cannot win the New York delegation.

Mr. Murphy was at Tammany Hall when he made the declaration for Mr. Cleveland during a talk about his visit to Washington. He said:

Murphy's Declaration of Cleveland's Strength.

"I saw and talked with the committeemen from most of the states. There was an interchange of views, but there seemed to be no decided sentiment for any man. It is not correct that I declared in talking with members of the committee for any candidate.

"I did repeat to gentlemen there a remark which I have made in conversation with friends here—that, if Grover Cleveland were nominated, he would be elected. I said I was confident he would carry New York."

"I did not declare for Mr. Cleveland or any one. It is not yet time to say whom Tammany will support for the nomination. I have no quarrel with Mr. Hill. I believe this is a Democratic year and that all signs point to Democratic victory. New York state is surely in the Democratic column."

"It has been reported that you are opposed to Judge Parker on account of his close relations with Mr. Hill. I have not said that I was for or against Judge Parker, or for or against any candidate. I have no quarrel with Mr. Hill."

"Will New York have a candidate for the nomination?"

"It may, but it is too early yet to say that. There is no doubt but that New York will go Democratic."

"Have you ever said you favored the nomination of Mr. Cleveland?"

"I don't think I have said so. I am not committed to any candidate. I believe that Mr. Cleveland can be nominated."

"That is another question. I cannot pass upon that yet."

BROCK STORTS TAKES BRIDE

Four Courts Lawyer, a Grandfather at 45, Weds Again on Birthday Anniversary.

Charles Brockway Storts, for many years a picturesque police court lawyer, celebrated his 45th birthday Saturday by marrying Mrs. Sarah Chapman of 29 South Twelfth street. Justice of the Peace Cronin performed the ceremony in his usual impressive manner.

Storts met Mrs. Chapman at Jerseyville, Ill., seven years ago, when she lived at Dayton, O. For five years they did not meet again. When Mrs. Chapman's husband died, legal complications in the settlement of his estate arose, and the widow employed Storts as her lawyer. He won the case in the Ohio courts, and the former passing acquaintance became a serious one.

Recently Storts persuaded Mrs. Chapman to come to St. Louis, and the courtship then ran merrily along to marriage Saturday.

C. Brock Storts is a brother of the late Jefferson Davis Storts, who was killed in a street car accident, and son of Henry Storts of Shannan Court. He is a grandfather, Charles Hayden Storts, a son now living at Fort Worth, Tex., having given him that distinction a year ago.

NOT TOO ILL TO SMOKE "HOP"

Woman Who Gets Continuance on Physician's Certificate Is Arrested in Opium Joint.

Two opium pipes taken from the opium joint in the rear of 713 Market street were produced in the City Hall police court Saturday as part of the evidence against Ah Moon, proprietor of the place raided by officers of the Central Station.

At the same time, Harry Coffey, Marie Day, Albert Geyer and May Harrington were arrested. May Harrington is well known to the police and has been on a grand larceny charge was called this week. She is positioned on a certificate from a physician, stating that she was too ill to appear. She was so greatly under the influence of opium that she was unable to be taken to the City Hospital.

ENGLAND MASSES POWERFUL FLEET NEAR PORT SAID

The Threatened Passage of the Russian Black Sea Squadron Through the Dardanelles Into the Mediterranean, Said to Be Cause of Concentration.

NEW PHASE OF SITUATION CAUSES ALARM IN EUROPE

Confirmations of the Story That Russian Torpedo Boats Attempted to Destroy the Cruisers Recently Purchased by Japan at Genoa.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—The fact that England is concentrating a fleet of over 50 warships in the Mediterranean near Port Said creates anxiety throughout Europe.

The reason for this massing of sea strength in the Mediterranean is found in the report that Russia is negotiating with Turkey for the passage of the Czar's powerful Black sea fleet through the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles, with the view of sending it to the Yellow sea.

The passage of the Dardanelles by the Russian fleet would be in violation of the Berlin treaty.

Prince Takinuki, telegraphing from on board the Japanese warship Nisaka, says that when the Nisaka and Kasuga, the two cruisers recently bought by Japan from Argentina, were being escorted through the Mediterranean by nine British warships they were approached by two Russian torpedo boats and that when the latter saw the powerful escort they left in haste for the harbor of Syracuse.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 15.—The situation may, in fact, be summed up as follows: Japan is pushing the Manchurian question, and Russia is pushing the Korean question. Japan is dissatisfied with the Russian note and returns it for amendment. According to the declaration of a high official of the foreign office, when the last Russian reply was sent to Japan, Russia had conceded all she possibly can, and while willing to grant small concessions to Japan in Korea, she refuses to discuss the question of Manchuria.

Japan insists in pushing the Manchurian open door question as a sine qua non, and also with equal insistence urging that she should have assurances of the integrity of Korea and China, to which Russia's consent is impossible.

Russia will reply in a similar tone and will lay her reasons before the powers justifying her attitude.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Daily Mail's Seoul correspondent cables an interview with M. Pavlov, the Russian minister to Korea, who said:

"Russia will refuse to agree to the opening of Wiju, and will protect Korean sovereignty at all costs. Russia would regard the landing of Japanese troops in Korea as an unfriendly act, and would defend the independence of Korea against pagan invaders."

In the same interview Minister Pavlov declared:

"The Russian fleet will not fight. Fabian tactics will be employed and Japan will defeat herself within a short period of being on a war footing."

SIXTY MORE MARINES GUARD THE AMERICAN LEGATION AT SEOUL

SEOUL, Korea, Jan. 15.—The American guard at the United States embassy has been increased. Sixty additional marines arrived here last night and are quartered in the city at the electric power company's building. The press is slightly offensive to foreign residents, and it is quite possible there will yet be trouble with Korea. Troops now guard all the foreign residences, probably in sufficient numbers to keep the natives in check should they begin to make trouble. Foreigners cannot be considered in danger. A German man-of-war has just arrived at Chemulpo.

A change in the personnel of the government of the natives in favor of the Japanese, and as the people have been more angry with the government than with the foreigners, it is likely that this change will completely pacify them.

The American authorities have taken the precaution to provide male escorts for women and children of that nationality while on the street.

EIGHT REASONS

why Scott's Emulsion is an ideal food-medicine.

1. It is partly pre-digested and therefore passes quickly into the blood.
2. It imposes no tax upon the stomach or other digestive organs.
3. It does not cause fermentation such as usually results from ordinary food when the stomach is weak.
4. Its action is mild and even, insuring the greatest nourishment with the least effort.
5. Its quality is always uniform.
6. It feeds and strengthens the bones, blood, nerves and tissues.
7. It is one of the greatest flesh producers known to medical science.
8. It is palatable and agreeable to the taste and easily taken.

TRIP ENDS IN A FUTILE ATTEMPT TO MURDER

Mrs. Oscar Lowery and Charles Brown.

Charles Brown Follows Former Wife to Springfield, Mo., With Awowed Intention of Killing Her.

Matrimonial complications which have existed between Charles Brown, Oscar Lowery and Mrs. Oscar Lowery since last June culminated at Springfield, Mo., in the attempt of Brown to kill Mrs. Lowery and her younger sister-in-law, Mary Lowery.

Mrs. Lowery was formerly Mrs. Brown. When Brown left her at her home, 322 South Eighteenth street, last spring, she married Oscar Lowery, who had been a roomer at their house.

Brown contended that the separation was irregular, and insisted that she was still his wife. He and Lowery had many fights over the matter, and last July Lowery attempted to commit suicide with morphine at the boarding house of Mrs. Caroline Miller, 1504 Washington avenue, where Brown and his wife had formerly lived.

In November Lowery and his wife moved to Springfield. Brown followed them last Monday night. Friday night he sent a note to Mrs. Lowery, and she went to the front gate to talk to him.

Almost before a word had been spoken he fired at her, shooting her in the arm. As he was running away he met Mary Lowery and shot at her, the ball striking her in the face. Neither wound is serious. The father of the woman fired at Brown, but did not hit him.

Brown hid in an alley, where he was captured and threats of lynching were made. He admits that his visit to Springfield was with the intention of killing both Mrs. Lowery and her husband.

Brown and the woman who was then his wife went to live at Mrs. Miller's house in March, 1902. Brown had bought her wedding outfit, complete from gloves to slippers, including the bridal veil. They went to live on South Eighteenth street last March. Mrs. Miller's daughter, Miss Louisa Miller, says Brown frequently threatened Lowery.

Brown's relatives are supposed to live at St. Louis City, 10. He once gave Mrs. Miller a letter, signed "M. Tabashinsky," dated St. Louis City, and asked her to notify the writer in the event that anything ever happened to him.

MRS. CUMMINGS IS OFF TO PENITENTIARY

On Her "Excursion," for Which She Was Splendidly Gowned Go Twenty-Six Black and White Murderers and Thieves.

Mrs. Minnie Cummings, fashionably attired in a black skirt, dark waist, white tie, tan cloak, white gloves and a big black hat with sweeping plume, started for Jefferson City at 7:35 Saturday morning to begin serving her ten years' sentence for the murder of her husband, Dennis Cummings.

She, accompanied by a deputy sheriff and the matron of the jail, was first of the prisoners to reach the station. She went from the Four Courts on a street car, and was escorted at once to the Missouri Penitentiary. She referred to her trip as an "excursion," and laughed and joked vivaciously.

She laughed again, with her lips curved somewhat scornfully, as the 26 men, black and white, and convicted of all crimes from murder to larceny, chained and handcuffed by two, came clanking along the Midway in charge of ten deputy sheriffs.

By mistake, Mrs. Cummings and the men were first taken to a car in which there were no other passengers. She sat on the inside, and gazed with interest out of the window; the matron sat beside her. The mistake was soon discovered, and a deputy sheriff ordered her into the car with the other prisoners.

"The idea," she exclaimed, "Am I to be forced to ride in there with these persons? I should think that as I am the only woman I should have a car to myself."

Her eyes flashed, but she had to move, and was taken to a seat near the rear of the prisoners.

Along the right side, she was permitted to sit on the left side, the matron in the seat beside her, and the ten deputy sheriffs lined along the left side, watching their prisoners.

The men began at once to smoke; and there was much justification for the disgusted look that Mrs. Cummings' face assumed.

"Well, I am sure it will be quite different at Jefferson City," she said. "I shan't be forced to associate with these persons there."

The dress worn by Mrs. Cummings was made by her while in jail, and she spent two hours Saturday morning preparing her toilet for the journey. She expected to be taken to the station in a carriage and to have a special car for the journey.

JUDGES AWARD COURT PRINTING

Lowest and Best Bid Is Held to Be That of the St. Louis Chronicle.

The contract for the legal printing for the next two years, was after an investigation by the circuit judges, awarded to the St. Louis Chronicle at a bid approximating 25 cents a square, or about 3 cents a line.

The bid of Al Spink's paper was much lower, but he failed to meet the conditions of circulation as required by the judges, and the contract was awarded to the next lowest bidder.

The circulation statements as filed by the bidders were: Post-Dispatch, 116,444; Globe-Democrat, 106,270; Chronicle, 48,308; Spink's paper, 22,000.

SHERIFF RUNNING A SALOON

Proprietor, Who Disappeared, Has Returned, but No License for Business Is Found.

Michael Kreiz, who disappeared from his saloon at 1500 Franklin avenue last Monday, when suits were brought against him by brewers, has returned. He visited the saloon Friday evening and said he had been "down in the country on business." Saturday he was at his home, 4109 Finney avenue.

The police are looking for Kreiz's license. The saloon is being operated by the sheriff. Before he had either a state or city license, issued since last July, failed Saturday.

PATHFINDER TELLS OF KIT CARSON

In Death of A. V. Hamilton Fremont Expedition Loses Last Surviving Member.

MOURNED FOR "OLD SOAP"

Dead Pioneer Trained Mule to His Liking and the Beast Would Not Move Unless He Led.

When Aaron V. Hamilton died at his home in Chain of Rocks last week, the last surviving member of the Fremont expedition to the Pacific coast passed away. He was ill but a few days. The funeral was held Sunday from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. John W. Pollard, and many old friends and admirers of this companion of the Pathfinder gathered about his bier.

Mr. Hamilton, a member of the Christian Church since 1875, lived a Christian life, was scrupulously honest and admired, both for his personal qualities and his interesting personality, by all who knew him.

"I was induced to join Capt. Fremont's party in St. Louis in 1846," wrote Mr. Hamilton not long before his death. "Over 1000 men applied for the 80 places allowed by the government and I was one of the favored ones. As a part of the United States topographical service we were perfectly equipped."

"There was some fun at the outset of that long trip, not so much later on. Reaching Westport, a point near the present site of Kansas City, by boat, Capt. Fremont procured 250 4-year-old, unbroken, range mules. Wild mules they were. But Capt. Fremont and his 80 men converted them into 250 model pack mules. This was the spirit of the expedition—to accomplish things."

It was at Fort Bent that Fremont and his men met Kit Carson, the scout and Indian fighter, who was to guide them to California.

Carson, as I remember him," Mr. Hamilton told his grandchildren as they gathered about his knees on a winter night, "was a small man, with long black hair and sharp gray eyes that made you think he was looking clear through you. Dick Owens Maxwell, a trapper, was with Carson, and so were three Spaniards. We remained at Fort Bent 20 days. Then Capt. Fremont chose 60 of his men to go on with him. The others went back to the states. I was one of the 60 with Fremont."

Mr. Hamilton told amusing incidents in the career of his pack mules.

It was in the spring of 1846 that we got back to Westport on our way home," he would say. "I had been away nearly three years. And the thought of home was sweet to me. But I hated to part with 'Old Soap.' He was my mule. He had made the whole journey with me and for me, and he was a good mule. He was a born leader. If he had been a man he would have elected himself President. He refused to take a single step unless I was on his back. Then he went cheerfully. Poor 'Old Soap!'"

Why Do Men Marry Ugly Women?

By Nikola Groceley-Smith.

WHY do men marry ugly women? For they do. One reason, of course, is that, notwithstanding the disguise of pretty clothes and the benefits of exercise and diet to the complexion, the ugly women are in an immense majority.

Another reason is that very few men are agreed as to what constitutes beauty in women. And while Jones, whose tastes run to pudgy blonds, may wonder what Brown ever saw in that skinny little dark wife of his, Brown is lost in similar amazement at his neighbor's selection.

As a rule men are impressionists of beauty. Given a woman of rather generous proportions, displayed rather generously in a tight-fitting blue and white or a black and white flannel gown, with good teeth, a good complexion and an undulating walk, and you have a man's beauty.

His mother or sister may notice that her eyes are small and shallow, her nose shapeless and that her mouth looks as if it had been made with a canopener, for women have a Melisander taste in beauty and advocate perfection of detail. But he is blissfully unaware of these facts, so long as she is well dressed and well put together.

Regularity of feature, or, indeed, symmetrical proportions, counts for very little with the average man.

If he were to express what kind of a woman he likes best, nine times out of ten he would describe a good, hearty, wholesome girl in a white shirtwaist. That is, of course, unless his affiliations are of the chorus. And even then an occasional longing for the white shirtwaist still assails him.

French and American men know "style" in a woman and admire it. In Anthony Hope's latest novel of "Double Harness" a society woman says to an ugly girl who was bewitching her lack of matrimonial chances: "You must go in for smartness, not prettiness. I really believe it pays better now."

adays." But notwithstanding Mr. Hope's discriminating eye and pen, the ordinary Englishman knows nothing of style, a providential deprivation surely designed to reconcile him to the Englishwoman. But in St. Louis what the English call "smartness" undoubtedly does go further than prettiness. And there are a great many ugly women who have the innate quality of style and an equal number of pretty women who lack it utterly. Of course, many men marry ugly women without this redeeming trait—hopelessly plain persons who make no attempt to atone for physical shortcomings by excellent of grooming and attire. But why they do it is a problem which they deserve to have to solve for themselves.

Happiest Moment to Come

From the Boston Post.

The late William L. Elkins, the street railway magnate of Philadelphia, was gifted with a grim humor. This humor a certain Philadelphia reporter has caused to remember.

He visited Mr. Elkins some years ago to procure one of those bizarre interviews which sometimes appear in Sunday newspapers. The getting of such interviews requires the asking of a number of peculiar questions, and the reporter opened fire in this way:

"Mr. Elkins, how did you earn your first thousand dollars?"

"The millionaire frowned, then smiled. "My hard work," he answered.

"Daunted a little, the reporter, in silence, tried to think up the next question. Presently he found it. It was:

"Mr. Elkins, you have lived a good many years, now tell me—what has been the happiest moment of your life?"

"It hasn't come yet," said Mr. Elkins.

"Not yet? When, then, will it come?"

"The reporter's eyes shone. Now he expected something good."

"It will come," said Mr. Elkins, "when people cease asking foolish questions."

HE PROBABLY FORGOT.

Jack: I called on Miss Giddyn last night and she said if I kissed her she would scream.

Tom: Well, under the circumstances, I don't think much of her reputation for veracity.

The Post-Dispatch Daily Story. Conversion of "Big Six"

The Colored People of the Doty Neighborhood Were Holding a Revival. Jordan Was the Beau of the Neighborhood. "Big Six" Was the Biggest Colored Woman Round About. Both She and Little Judy Were in Love With Jordan. This Is a Story of What Happened Because of Their Rivalry.

BY S. B. HACKLEY.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THE "big meeting" at the schoolhouse "up the creek" was getting in full swing—the preacher, or preachers, for there were volunteer gospel expounders in plenty, every night exhorted long and loud—the wildest and most reckless among the young negroes wept and trembled in their seats, excitement ran high, and the conversions were many and real.

Jordan Danglefield, the ring-leader of the reckless, was a conspicuous example of the unconverted among the men. No word of argument, no appeal of song, had yet brought him to the "mourner's bench." "Big Six," whose real name was Rachel Curd, was the one woman against whom stones of persuasion and pleading were thrown in vain.

Rachel weighed 300 pounds, and as she boasted she could do the work of a hair dozen women, she was more often called by the appellation of "Big Six" than by her right name. Jordan was the beau of the county; he was not only the most fascinating among the negro youth, but his ability to make money was great. In the hemp-breaking season his nightly bale out-weighed any other hand's—in corn cutting time he could cut more corn by day and dance longer by night than any other.

Many a wistful eye was turned toward Jordan, but his heart inclined toward Judy Danglefield—good little Judy, whose eyes spoke perpetual worship and appeal. She did not care for Jordan's money-making ability—it was Jordan himself, big, black and strapping, that Judy loved as a creature heaven sent.

Latterly, however, Rachel Curd had concluded that a combination of Jordan's financial ability and her own would be a fine thing, and she proceeded to "cut out" poor Judy.

She joined herself to the crowd of young people who nightly passed by Judy's humble home on their way to the "meeting," and she contrived to get Jordan's arm within her own before they reached the cabin, and to rush him along so rapidly, and so flatter his mind with her wily compliments that he forgot even to glance toward the window where Judy was waiting, and there was nothing for poor Judy to do but to creep humbly to "meetin'," in the wake of the gay crowd, with no other escort than "pap" or "mammy."

The meeting went on—while Judy wept and prayed for the salvation of her recalcitrant lover, Rachel further installed herself in Jordan's favor by agreeing with him in his rejection of the Good Tidings. If he mocked the converted, she mocked harder; if he laughed at their somber faces, she laughed louder. Gentle, shrinking Judy, soft-voiced and patient, was no match for Rachel's bluster, and Jordan, seemingly entirely won away, was no longer to be sought by Six. He did the meeting every evening.

The Doty, Judy's "white folks," had company at the "house." Thus it happened that one Saturday morning when the moon was well on toward its twentieth night, a big "wash" was set down at Judy's mother's door. When Jordan Danglefield, en route to the Doty hay fields, passed the cabin, a sound of mighty rubbing was heard on the inside of the door. The happy times he had passed under the little "lean-to," before Rachel Curd had lured him away, came to him, and he paused to look through the hollyhocks at the small woman bent over the tub, again. As he surreptitiously watched the tears that now and then fell on the Doty baby's lace-trimmed white dress, and noted how thin poor Judy's small face had become since the meeting had begun, his heart burned with shame, and presently he was standing by the wash bench with the words: "Judy, kin I hab de honnuh o' 'scortin' you tuh de meetin' tonight?" on his lips.

Judy looked up with a start. "Why—why, Lawd, if you stammered, 'I—Does you raly want me go wid you?'"

The chains with which Rachel Curd had bound Jordan fell away under the power of Judy's look of reproachful love, and when he found himself treading the dusty road again, his thoughts were as far from Rachel as they were from the hay fork on his shoulder.

A suppressed titter went round that evening, as, accompanied by a female friend only, Big Six, in second-hand finery of wine-colored silk and white-plumed leghorn, came in the schoolhouse and took a seat just behind Jordan and Judy. Judy, in her best dress, a hard-earned and many times washed white, was seated by the door, and all unconscious of the glance that boded no good that fell on her from the wealthy Rachel.

"Look at Big Six!" whispered one young wench to another. "Lawd, if wouldn't let losin' uh beau put me up de sugar!"

"I 'clah, she look like she mournin'—mebbe she gwine come th'oo tonight!" said the other, derisively.

It proved to be an unusually tumultuous meeting. The "mourner's bench," recently lengthened by the addition of three new benches, filled up. The air became fervid. High above the songs of the younger ones could be heard the happy shouts of the elders; the invitation hymn was sung again and again, and while it rolled upward in a wailing-unctuous, strong—a low-drawn, murmur of surprise checked the voices. Big Six had risen and was making her way to the mourner's bench!

A greater wave of excitement swept over the throng; a keen-voiced negroes changed the song. "Oh Satan thought he had me fas'! But I has broke his chains—I'm free at last!"

As the congregation took up the refrain the saints all over the house shouted anew in their joy. Some reeled in their excitement and fell over the benches—not a few rolled on the floor in joyous frenzy, and near the door four men were compelled to hold a slim matron to prevent her from overturning the freestone stove and injuring herself in her excitement.

Suddenly Rachel flung up her hands, and her call could be heard above the loudest shouts of the multitude. "Glory! Glory! Gimme de glory! I see convincin' o' my ongodly deeds, Gimme de glory now!"

"Come on, friends an' g'ib de hand to de penitent ones!" cried the preacher, and the crowd surged toward the mourner's bench. Rachel stood quiet, her eyes glazed and rolling, evidently unconscious of those who clasped her hands, but when Judy stood in front of her, she was apparently seized with another paroxysm of joy.

"Glory!" she shouted, plunging forward, "I got de glory now!" With one hand she struck off Judy's cherished straw sailor and trampled it under her feet. With the other, she gave one mighty jerk, and the white waste waist was hanging from Judy's trembling shoulders.

"Glory!" Judy's "fuh" fuh "glory" now! she ejaculated, and with lightning rapidity her fat hand dealt a blinding blow in the face of her unfortunate rival. Then lowering her head, like a charging bull, Six literally butted screaming Judy out of the open side door and stamped her disheveled body before the confused negroes realized what she was doing.

Jordan leaped to the rescue, and while willing hands pulled off Six, he lifted the lamp and helpless Judy, whose torn dress was dyed with the crimson tide that crept from her mangled nose.

The meeting broke up in confusion. Those who rejoiced most over the apparent conversion of Big Six were loudest in condemnation of her method of announcing.

Beauty is Within Your Reach

BEAUTY depends so much upon what you do that it is practically within reach of every woman. In her really great series of papers, "The Fountain of Youth," Doctor Grace Peckham Murray shows plainly how beauty is the result of a woman's care of herself. She tells you just what is to be done to the hair, teeth, eyes, complexion and hands to make even a plain woman attractive. All of her suggestions are healthful and sensible. They not only make a woman look better, but they make her feel better. They show that health and attractiveness go together. They analyze a woman's charm and tell her how to obtain it. No such remarkable series of papers has ever been published. No woman can afford to ignore them. Every woman who wants to be attractive should get The Delineator and read these papers.

has become the smartest dressmaker of the best dressed set in the world. She is no mere dressmaker—she is a creator of styles. She knows how to tell what she knows, and she tells it in The Delineator. What she writes is in addition to seventy new designs by The Delineator's own staff. She tells this month, as it has never been told before, the real secret of the new skirt, just how long and how full it should be, and how it should hang. She also tells about the famous "trotter" skirt.

The True Love of Music

is so intense that it follows the great songsters into their intimate, daily home lives. The second of the prima donna series treats of CALVÉ, who of the world's great singers probably has the most interesting personality. No woman who knows of CALVÉ can fail to be interested in this story of her life.

"Just get The Delineator" and see how many things there are in it which help to make a woman's entire life worth while. You will then know why it is the most necessary magazine for women.

DICK WELLES' PIONEER CHURCH

St. Peter's Edifice Has Been Remarkably Connected With Life of Nicholas Meyer.

HIS MARRIAGE FIRST IN IT

Fifty Years Later Celebrates His Golden Wedding Anniversary There.

HOW TWO LIVES WERE LINKED WITH A CHURCH.

Nicholas Meyer built St. Peter's Church at Belleville, Ill., in 1884. Married in it before completed. His eight children christened in it. There celebrated his golden wedding anniversary.

He built the church after his collapse. Wife's funeral held from it. She leaves church good portion of her fortune and special sum for masses for herself and husband. Meyer died in it in securing contract.

Nicholas Meyer, now 85 and blind, intends his funeral shall be held from it.

Out of sheer love for the church, whose history was almost identical with that of her own life, Mrs. Nicholas Meyer of Belleville provided in her last will and testament that a goodly share of her modest fortune should go to St. Peter's Roman Catholic Cathedral. The remainder of the estate was left to her children on condition that if any one should contest the will his share should be forfeited.

Mrs. Meyer loved St. Peter's Church dearly. The old cathedral was a part of her own life. Born in Nancy, France, in the year 1848, pretty little Veronique Louis came to America at the age of 6 years with her parents, who settled at old Cahokia. In due time they found their way to Belleville, and the parents took an active part in the organization of a Catholic parish. The parents of young Nicholas Meyer were also prominent in the pioneer religious work, and it was at these early church meetings that Veronique and Nicholas met and fell in love.

Young Nicholas said: "I cannot marry you, Veronique, till I do something to better myself in the world."

He was then a struggling carpenter and contractor, a good one, too, but with a reputation to make.

"I will help him," determined the little French girl, and when the parish meeting was called to take steps toward the building of a cathedral international boundary lines were overstepped and the French and German Catholics joined together to build the building which was to be St. Peter's.

Thanks Now of Marrying. The erection of St. Peter's Cathedral, the first Catholic church in Belleville, was begun then, in the early autumn of 1884, and in the early spring of the following year the young contractor decided that he was getting on in the world sufficiently to be able to get married. But Veronique had already conceived the notion of having the wedding celebrated in the new cathedral. Nicholas then pushed his work on to completion with the idea of being able to furnish the parish with the roof.

In early summer the roof was on, and though the floor was not yet laid in the new church, the happy young couple would wait until longer. The longer they waited, however, the more anxious the young man became to get married. In due time the union was blessed with children, and Nicholas, who was a carpenter, was christened in St. Peter's Cathedral. The infant, already dear to the hearts of the fond parents, was named Nicholas.

During the civil war, when Mr. and Mrs. Meyer were on account of reverses, disheartened and low-spirited, like the nation, the old cathedral building, which was the roof and two of the walls falling in.

He Again Builds Church. Regarding this as an omen, the couple plucked up courage and determined to make a fresh start in life. It was on Mr. Meyer's name's day, St. Nicholas Day, Dec. 6, 1884, that the old church collapsed, another strange coincidence in their lives and that of the cathedral. The civil war soon ended and the parish set about rebuilding the structure that had fallen down.

Again Nicholas Meyer was selected as the builder, and he soon had the same new St. Peter's Cathedral completed, as it is today, at Third and Race streets in Belleville.

In due course of time the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Meyer rolled around. They had married 50 years. That was nearly 50 years ago, May 12, 1884, and again the old cathedral was called upon to witness the joyous occasion. The young couple had been married there, and the celebration was held in the cathedral. The wedding ceremony was performed again as in the glad young days. The guests were legion.

Then the final chapter in the aged wife's life. She passed away on the morning of Jan. 7, 1934, after a lingering illness at St. Peter's. She had been taken up to her home there with her aged and infirm husband, now 85 years old and blind. It would have been almost a sacrifice to hold the funeral elsewhere than in the old cathedral, and there the solemn requiem mass for the repose of the soul of the dead was said.

Little wonder was it then that in her will this woman should have given the church that had been so closely identified with her life, and the happiness of her own life. She bequeathed to St. Peter's Cathedral a considerable portion of her wealth. The sum of $10,000 for the repose of the souls of herself and husband, and an additional $10,000 was a straight-out gift without comment in the will.

LEGAL ADOPTION QUESTIONED. Claim Against Winner Estate Is Disputed by Widow.

George Barkie, who claims the right to the name Winner through legal adoption by Herman Fisher, has filed suit to collect $12,515.28 from the estate of Mr. Winner, who died May 5, 1931, leaving an estate of $27,414, which was divided between the widow, the widow, and Albert A. Winner, who was the claimant.

DICK WELLES TO TRY FOR GREAT M'CHESNEY'S LAURELS

Rome Respects' Wonderful Sprinter Will Be Sent After Distance Records When Coming Season Is Under Way.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 16.—While speculation as to whether Waterbury, McChesney, Hermis or Africander will be the next year's champion racehorse is going the rounds, it is possible that none of the contenders named will carry off the honor, but that Dick Welles, holder of the world's record for six furlongs and one mile, which he made last year over the western courses, will be sent on longer journeys during the coming season.

The greatest son of King Eric is now wintering at Rome Respects farm, near Covington, and is reported to be in good condition.

The western champion has the reputation of being a sprinter and it is his owner's ambition to prove that he has a horse which can go a mile and carry weight. If Rome Respects believes that Dick Welles will do what is required of him the horse will meet some of the best handicappers in the East, many of which have already shown winners in the Grand American.

This is the only colt in which the western colt is entered so far, and although it is too early for a prediction he will have a good chance to win the Grand American, which is the best handicap race in the country.

It is only natural that the horse is named after the owner, the reason that he is never raced over a distance of more than one mile and one-eighth, and to the average western horseman it looked that even with his wonderful speed, he was at his best once around the circuit.

fact that caused comment was that the colt was not entered in the American Derby last year. He was in good condition and seemed to have a chance to win that rich event.

It is said that Respects was unable to get the colt ready to go a mile and a half, and rather than risk a defeat he decided to serve his speed and race him over the shorter distance during the season of 1933. confident that he had the stamina to go further, and that with a year added to his age and a careful preparation in the spring he would be able to beat the best handicap horses in the country at a mile and a quarter and a mile and a half.

Dick Welles' races on the western tracks will be watched by the eastern as well as the western public, as the colt is entered in the Brighton handicap, in which event he will meet some of the best handicappers in the East, many of which have already shown winners in the Grand American. This will be shot on Friday.

The tournament will be held in the week following the Republican National convention, and railroad rates for this convention and for the World's Fair will be low enough to bring many of the prominent followers of the sport. Heretofore the Grand American has been held in April, but Manager Shaffer believed that many shippers would stop in Indianapolis on their way to the World's Fair.

PUGILISM--BILLIARDS

GRAND AMERICAN AT INDIANAPOLIS

NO LEAGUE WAR OVER SUNDAY BALL

Johnston of American League Says New York Will Not Play If Shown It Is Illegal.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—War is not the aim of the American League in arranging for Sunday baseball at Ridgewood, according to B. B. Johnston, in a recent utterance. It is just as certain, however, that it will take a lot of evidence to show the young league that there is anything in the Cincinnati peace compact or in the national agreement which will hinder the carrying out of the project started by President Farrell.

As soon as the American League can be convinced that the playing of Sunday ball on the Ridgewood Park is in any way contrary to the Cincinnati peace treaty or the national agreement, we will be glad to withdraw from our position," said Johnston. "The American League does not want to appear as an organization breaking its agreements; on the other hand, it is determined to maintain its reputation of never having broken a pledge given to the public."

"We are thoroughly convinced, however, that neither the preliminary peace compact nor the national agreement contains any clause which can in any way bar the American League from using the park as planned by the Greater New York club."

PLUNGER RYAN TO QUIT BETTING

Announces That His Turf Career Is Ended, Notwithstanding Removal of Outlawing Ban.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—There is an opinion on the other side of the Atlantic among yachtsmen that the new Yacht Club will agree to accept a challenge for the American Cup. The club, which is a natural increase, keeping pace with the growth of the country, but many times that.

In every city are to be found scores of young men who are working out in gymnasiums and athletic clubs, trying their prowess with a view to tasting the glories and profits of the prize ring.

More fights, bigger crowds and larger prices are obtained now than ever before notwithstanding the fact that the decline of the sport.

But, if you have any idea of becoming a fighter, back right up, change mind and become a ball player or anything but a "pug" that is, if you like three square meals and a place to sleep.

There is a general idea, prevalent among both young and ambitious boxers and ring-followers, that the earnings of a pugilist are something almost stupendous. The fortune made in a single fight, or saved by the various stars are continually quoted in the papers, and so frequently have these fortunes been harped on that the average enthusiast regards the average boxer as a solid young man.

As a plain and painful fact, while the stars in the different classes make plenty of money, and if they were not wild-eyed spendthrifts, would make plenty of money, the earnings of the struggling young fighter are of the most pitifully small. He is really a man who is at from day to day. But hard are the lines of the young man who has nothing to rely on but his own strength and his own money.

He is a manager, gets $7.50, and he coughs up 50 cents apiece to each of two secretaries. He is a champion, and he is away from the ring, and on that he has to live or exist—three weeks or so, until another fight comes.

Seven boxers out of ten, when they change cities, go under the cars or on top. Sometimes they go under the cars or on top. Sometimes they go under the cars or on top. Sometimes they go under the cars or on top.

NO LEAGUE WAR OVER SUNDAY BALL

Johnston of American League Says New York Will Not Play If Shown It Is Illegal.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—War is not the aim of the American League in arranging for Sunday baseball at Ridgewood, according to B. B. Johnston, in a recent utterance. It is just as certain, however, that it will take a lot of evidence to show the young league that there is anything in the Cincinnati peace compact or in the national agreement which will hinder the carrying out of the project started by President Farrell.

As soon as the American League can be convinced that the playing of Sunday ball on the Ridgewood Park is in any way contrary to the Cincinnati peace treaty or the national agreement, we will be glad to withdraw from our position," said Johnston. "The American League does not want to appear as an organization breaking its agreements; on the other hand, it is determined to maintain its reputation of never having broken a pledge given to the public."

"We are thoroughly convinced, however, that neither the preliminary peace compact nor the national agreement contains any clause which can in any way bar the American League from using the park as planned by the Greater New York club."

BANK STATEMENT WAS EXCELLENT

Deposits Larger Than Loans, but Market Remains Inactive.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The opening was very quiet this morning, though the undertone was good and the majority of the stocks showed an advance. London was a trifle higher in spite of the unfavorable war news, though business was exceedingly quiet.

The interest of course, centered around the war news and the bank statement. Foreign advances were to the effect that it was practically impossible to avoid a clash and that hostilities might break out at any moment. In the bank statement, the predictions were most favorable. According to the preliminary reports that banks had advanced about $15,000,000 in cash this week, and the floor was prepared to be disappointed if the statement was not a decidedly good one.

The activity in Pacific Mail continued this morning, and in the early part of the day the stock was up to 1 1/2. The prospects of war, which would put the Japanese steamer out of competition, was construed as especially favorable to the company. There were few other stock advances and few dealers to take any long changes of short selling to any considerable extent.

The trading for the first half hour was quiet and only a few changes were shown. The range of prices was narrow, and outside of Pacific Mail they were mainly confined to fractional changes.

The market showed no particular changes as far as the recognized standard stocks were concerned. Fluctuations were narrow and no particular gossip was about to affect the prices. Speculation was a possible exception to this, as it showed a good tone and some excellent buying. It is said that many of the leaders who were feeling rather gloomy a short time ago are changing their opinion and are now in a condition of the iron and steel trade leads them to believe that the next quarterly statement will be a decided improvement on the last one.

In the specialties, Pacific Mail continued active and was easily put up to 1 1/2. The Alton common had the same strength that was accorded the preferred a few days ago. The common today struck 2 1/2, with only slight reaction.

The bank statement was as satisfactory as could be desired. Some of the best points are credited with saying that it is one of the best ever issued. The enormous increase in deposits was preferred to the increase in the loan account.

The market did not show activity to any appreciable extent after the publication of the statement. Trading was listless until early in the afternoon when some business and the last price generally showed an advance for the day in the majority of the line.
